Message to the President

The United Nations is an intergovernmental organization that was established to promote international cooperation and to achieve international peace and security. It was created by the United Nations Charter, which was signed on 26 June 1945.

The United Nations is governed by a General Assembly, which is composed of representatives from all member states. The General Assembly is the principal organ of the United Nations.

The Secretariat of the United Nations is the executive branch of the United Nations that is responsible for implementing the decisions of the General Assembly and other organs of the United Nations.

The United Nations is divided into six main organs:

1. The General Assembly
2. The Security Council
3. The Economic and Social Council
4. The International Court of Justice
5. The Trusteeship Council
6. The Secretariat

The United Nations is headquartered in New York City, with other major offices in Geneva, Vienna, and Nairobi.

The United Nations has played a crucial role in maintaining international peace and security, promoting human rights, and advancing global development. Its success is due in large part to the dedication and commitment of its member states and the UN staff.

The United Nations has achieved many significant accomplishments, such as:

- Promoting international cooperation and the peaceful resolution of conflicts
- Advancing human rights and fundamental freedoms
- Building international consensus on global challenges, such as climate change and nuclear non-proliferation
- Implementing international law and standards
- Promoting economic and social development
- Protecting the environment and natural resources

The United Nations has a number of specialized agencies, such as the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the United Nations Development Program (UNDP), the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), and the World Health Organization (WHO).

The United Nations has also been at the forefront of efforts to address global challenges, such as pandemics, climate change, and global poverty.

The UNA-SRI LANKA is an important partner and supporter of the United Nations in Sri Lanka, and we look forward to continuing our collaboration in the years to come.
